ARCTIC COLD HOLDS COUNTY IN GRASP

Fuel Shortage Adds To Cruel Blows Of Cold

LONDON (UPI) — Critical fuel shortages were reported today all over Western Europe, refrigerators since Christmas by a cold wave which in some places was one of the worst in nearly 300 years. Communist-held Eastern Europe also had its difficulties. Snow-smothered Bulgaria proclaimed a state of emergency. East Germany closed non-essential factories and drafted employees for emergency service as miners, truck drivers and power workers.

Neon lights in East German cities were turned off and street lights were dimmed. Gangs of young vigilantes prowled the streets, ordering householders to turn off unnecessary lights.

Russia reported temperatures as low as 24 below zero.

Western nations where fuel was short included Austria, Britain, France, West Germany, Holland and Switzerland.

Weather forecasters in Britain said it may be a month before the frigid weather moderates. In London, geography Prof. Gordon Manley said this winter ranked among the 10 worst in Britain since 1684.

British Railways canceled many passenger trains to make way for emergency shipments of coal to London and other parts of southern England.

Freezing fog added to Britain's troubles, reducing visibility in some places to as little as 15 feet.

A gas alert was ordered in the West German town of Otterndorf, where cooking gas leaking from cold-ruptured mains killed two women.

In Rotterdam, where heavy ice had given drinking water a salty tinge, fresh water could be obtained only on a doctor's prescription. A dairy was preparing to "pasteurize" the city's regular water supply.

Some gondoliers in Venice had to be rescued by a police boat. Farmers elsewhere in Italy said crop losses would run into the millions of dollars.

Spain was lashed by winds of hurricane force, reaching velocities as high as 81 miles an hour.

Breathitt Attacks Chandler Program

RICHMOND, Ky. (UPI) — Edward T. (Ned) Breathitt, candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in the May primary, Wednesday night attacked former Gov. A. B. Chandler's program for education.

Breathitt, speaking at the Jefferson County Courthouse, said: "Chandler has a program for you if you are satisfied with fast place for Kentucky in education."

"My opponent apparently is satisfied," Breathitt declared, "but the parents of our children are not satisfied. The people of Kentucky are not satisfied. Industries are not satisfied and I am not satisfied."

He said the state must move ahead in education.

He said that Chandler, speaking over a Lexington radio station last week, "brazenly invited every school teacher not satisfied with the progress of education in our state to leave Kentucky."

Breathitt said that less than half of the teachers graduating from Kentucky colleges remained in the state to teach in 1959, but that last year "more than 70 per cent stayed."

He noted that Kentucky was first in the nation in state college advances in 1960.

Chandler Names Campaign Member

LOUISVILLE (UPI) — The appointment of state Sen. Casper S. (Cap) Gardner, of Owensboro, as legislative chairman for the campaign of former Gov. A. B. Chandler and former Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Watersfield, was announced late Wednesday.

Mack Walters, chairman of the Chandler-Watersfield campaign, said Gardner would join the staff on a full-time basis following the adjournment of the special session of the General Assembly.

Gardner, 47, former mayor of Owensboro, was re-elected to the state Senate in 1961 and is chairman of its Committee on Municipalities.

He had been rumored as a possible candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, but said his decision not to run was based largely on the convenience of his wife, who was injured in a 1962 traffic accident in which he also was involved.

After his appointment, Gardner said, "It is my determined purpose to operate our state government on a strong, sound, financial basis, and by the application of economic measures be able to remove the unjust features of the present tax structure."

Kirksey PTA Has Meeting On Tuesday

The Kirksey Parent-Teachers Association met Tuesday night in the auditorium of the school with approximately 80 persons in attendance.

Mrs. Ken Adams president, called the meeting to order. The program was opened by singing, "My Old Kentucky Home" led by Mrs. Kenton Broach. Bro. Marlin Moyer, pastor of the Locust Grove Nazarene Church, gave the devotion. He chose his scripture reading from the 19th chapter of St. Matthew and spoke on the "Stewardship of Children."

The guest speaker of the evening was Dr. Ralph Tessenier of the psychology department of Murray State College. Dr. Tessenier gave a very interesting discussion on mental health. The subject of his talk was, "Do You See What I See?"

He suggested there are three points to check if a person is not satisfied with his own progress. The three points were listed as a change of need, change in attitude, and change of environment. Following these rules will help a person lead a happier and better adjusted life, the speaker said.

Miss Smith's third grade won the room count with 17 pupils present. After a short business session the meeting was adjourned. Coffee and donuts were served in Mrs. Hopkins' eighth grade room with Miss Smith, Mrs. Hopkins, and the home room mothers as hostesses.

Tribute Paid To Ledger And Times Newspaper Boys

The Ledger and Times wishes to pay a special tribute to the newspaper carriers of the daily paper for the job they accomplished yesterday.

All twenty-three carriers for the paper showed up in the one degree above zero weather, to pick up their papers.

All city routes were delivered as usual even though the mercury dropped rapidly in the evening and it was four below zero by the time some of them had negotiated the heavy snow and bitter cold.

Hazel and Lynn Grove carriers were prompt in their delivery in spite of the biting wind and snow.

Newspaper carriers are taken for granted sometimes, but yesterday they showed their courage and devotion to duty by delivering the daily Ledger and Times as usual.

Ledger and Times newspaper boys are "little merchants" in that they deliver the paper, collect for them, then pay their bills to the circulation manager each week.

Many of them have savings accounts where they deposit money each week, while others are paying on a bicycle, a radio, or clothing.

They are learning early in life the value of performing a service in the right way, payment of bills, the value of a dollar, and the meaning of responsibility.

The Ledger and Times salutes its twenty-three carrier boys who deliver more daily papers to more homes than any other newspapers.

TAXES-AT-A-GLANCE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy's tax program at a glance.

Deductions — Limit itemized deductions to those in excess of 5 per cent of the taxpayer's income. This would recapture $2.9 billion of proposed $11 billion cut in individual income taxes.

Rates — Cut individual income tax rates from present 20-to-91 per cent range to 14 to 65 per cent over three years; cut corporate rates from present 52 to 47 per cent over two years.

Groups — New tax advantages for persons over 65, working mothers, professional athletes and others; tougher treatment for oil, gas, and stock options and stock dividends.

Outlook — Chances are Congress will approve a major tax cut this year, but without some of the revenue-producing "reforms" Kennedy wants.

B. A. Purdom Funeral Held In Illinois

R. Q. Knight of Murray, Illinois, last night from Chicago, Illinois where he attended the funeral of Benjamin A. Purdom, who was born and reared in Calloway.

Mr. Knight reported that the temperature was 23 below zero and fourteen inches of snow was on the ground.

HI-LO

NEW YORK (UPI) — The lowest temperature reported this morning by the U.S. Weather Bureau, excluding Alaska and Hawaii, was 22 degrees below zero at Williston, N.D. The highest Wednesday was 82 at Vero Beach, Fla.

County Suffers As 12 Below Zero Is Registered Here

A bitter arctic cold held Calloway County in its grasp for the second straight day today with only a slight moderation forecast for tonight. Little if any of the four inch snow of yesterday melted during the day yesterday as a weak sun came out in the afternoon.

Last night the official temperature sank to 12 degrees below zero making the heating of homes almost impossible in some cases. Heaters ran wide open last night without ceasing and many report that the warm air still failed to hold off the paralyzing cold.

Ample fuel supplies added to a great extent, however homes in this area are not built to withstand below zero cold for extended lengths of time.

Record or near record uses of electricity and natural gas were marked up as well as heavy uses of other fuels used in the county.

Graders moved on the main streets through town yesterday scraping the snow from the streets and piling it to one side and trucks scattered cinders on the hills to give more traction.

Motorists moved slowly throughout the day in order to avoid accidents. This morning literally dozens of automobiles failed to start and anyone who was able to get the family automobile started felt fortunate indeed.

Service stations were jammed with calls for a "hot battery" and worked down the list as quickly as time and traffic permitted.

Frozen water pipes inconvenienced many people, but the principal idea was to try and stay warm. Families with small children and babies had an especially difficult time last night.

The weatherman has forecast a low tonight of from zero to five above which will bring some relief to Calloway countians.

Public Hearing On Ordinance Cancelled

A public hearing scheduled for tonight on amendments to the Murray Zoning Ordinance has been cancelled.

The hearing will be announced for a later date.

It was felt that due to the severe weather many people who planned to attend the hearing might not be able to attend, therefore the hearing was cancelled until a later date.

The amendments to the ordinance clarify certain sections of the ordinance and adds a new section concerned with floodways.

FARM BUREAU in Action
Kentucky Farm Bureau Fed.

By J. E. Stanford

With all the talk about a tax cut, Farm Bureau has taken the soundest and most sensible approach to this complicated problem.

Though official policy Farm Bureau members say: "We recognize the need for a substantial downward adjustment in federal taxes to create a better climate for economic growth."

The current budget deficit and our mounting national debt make it mandatory that a cut in federal expenditures accompany any general reduction in taxes. We are opposed to tax cut proposals which would further unbalance the budget and add to our already excessive national debt. We recommend, therefore, that the federal budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1963 be reduced at least 10 percent below the current level in order to permit both a reduction in the deficit and a tax cut.

What could seem more realistic than the urge that any reduction in income be accompanied by a reduction in both spending and the national debt? A balanced budget is basic to sound government. Any plan for tax reduction must be based on this principle.

As evidence of farmers' willingness to share in a general appropriations cut, Farm Bureau proposes that the U. S. Department of Agriculture's budget be reduced by $1 billion for fiscal year 1963-64. Such move would more than account for agriculture's proportionate share of the 10 percent budget cut suggested by the organization. Items accounting for the $1 billion curtailment in spending could, for example, include:

$300 million from emergency feed grain program; $400 million by reduction in wheat export subsidies; $100 million from reduced cotton export subsidies; and $100 million by savings of the Agricultural Conservation Program. Consider an increase cost of $400 million for operation of the Farm Bureau proposed Price Support and Adjustment Program for 1963 and the net savings is approximately $1 billion.

The big question is: How will such a program affect farm income? The best minds predict little or no immediate change and possible increases in the future. At any rate, farmers are willing to take risks to return our country to a sound financial footing.

Hard-Pressed Memphis Gets 60-58 Decision Over Determined Murray On Last Second Shot

Hard-pressed Memphis State won a 60-58 decision over battling Murray State on the strength of a last second field goal here last night.

Memphis' Hunter Beckman fired in a 20 foot shot with two seconds left in the game to give the Tigers a two-point edge. Murray, left with only one second on the clock, never had an opportunity to get off a shot.

The Racers had led by as much as eight points in the second half after holding a 34-30 lead at halftime. Memphis led by as much as eight points on several occasions in the first half.

Murray jumped to a quick 6-0 lead only to have Memphis hit a hot streak and roar past to post a 23-15 advantage with some nine minutes until the half-way mark.

With Jim Jennings and Butch Hill showing the way, the determined Racers came back to knot the count 28-28. Substitute Butch Hill notched the tying basket and Gene Pendleton put Murray on top at 3-42.

Memphis seized its opportunity for a last shot before the period ended and tried to press the Racers out of a last attempt. But the fast-breaking Racers came through on a beautiful feed by Schlosser to Gene Pendleton for the lay-up and a four-point edge.

A three point play by Schlosser built the Thoroughbred lead to eight points, 41-33, early in the second half.

George Kirk then piloted the Tigers to a fast come-back and connected for the lay-up with 8:45 to go that put Memphis on top 48-47. The Tigers moved away to post a five-point margin with only two minutes and 17 seconds left.

The determined Racers charged back on a jumper by Schlosser. Al Varnas poked in three points at the charity stripe with the last two tosses knotting the score 58-all with 1:20 remaining.

Murray had a chance to go on top with 1:05 showing on the clock. But Jennings missed both his free throws and Memphis held for the game-winning basket.

Scott Schlosser was the top point producer for the Racers with 19 markers. He was followed by Al Varnas with 14 and Jennings with 13. Kirk led Memphis with 18 points.

Murray now stands 9-6 for the season and Memphis is 12-4. It was the 13th straight win over Murray for the Tigers but Murray still holds a slight edge in the long series.

The Racers will take a mid-term breather until February 2nd when they journey to Jonesboro, Arkansas for a return match with Arkansas State.

Just Keep Dialing...

If you got a busy signal when dialing 753-6363 for time and temperature the last two days, it was due to an unusual amount of calls by persons wanting to know how cold it was.

Although we have five direct lines to serve calls dialed to that magic number, 753-6363, the demand of service the current cold spell started has been greater than our facilities could handle.

From Wednesday 9 A.M. to Thursday 9 A.M., 15,368 calls were made to this special number seeking time and temperature. This was an average of over ten calls per minute for the 24 hour period.

Please call again in a few seconds if you get a busy signal when dialing 753-6363.

We appreciate the record number of 128,458 calls received during the past month of December. This was an average of 4,144 calls per day.

Wrather to Help Plan State Educational TV

Mr. M. O. Wrather has been appointed to the advisory committee of the Kentucky Authority for Educational Television to help plan the state's educational-television program.

He was recommended for the 36-member committee by President Ralph H. Woods and appointed by the KAEF to serve an one-year term. He began serving his term the first of January.

"The committee will try to advise on development of programs and utilization of broadcasts from the television authority," said Dr. Woods.

Kentucky expects to contract with the Midwest Program on Airborne Television Instruction to supply televised courses for the state network's first year of operation next school year, officials have stated.

Mr. Richard Van Housen, superintendent of Jefferson County Schools, is chairman of the committee.

$1 ALIMONY—Vicki Dougan of the Hollywood set appears in L. A. court to divorce actor husband James Sweeney, who, she claimed, deserted her after going through her $10,000 savings. She accepted only $1 per month alimony for two and one-half years.

CHRYSLER'S 'EXPORT' MODEL—A one-fourth size model of a minicar is unveiled by Chrysler at the Society of Automotive Engineers Convention in Detroit. Showing it are Dr. Philip W. Lett (left) and Lovell Lawrence Jr., who said the six-wheeled, two-passenger vehicle would be powered by liquid hydrogen and oxygen. Design and shape were determined after hundreds of tests under conditions believed to exist on the moon. The car would be 12 feet long, six wide, nearly six high. It would travel at about 10 mph.

GETTING TRIMMED—Actress Elizabeth Taylor watches as "husband" Richard Burton gets his locks shorn on the "V.I.P." set in London. They play husband and wife in film.

House Rules Committee In Big Ruckus

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hyperbole is an overused word that precisely describes the ruckus on the opening day of Congress about the membership of the House Rules Committee.

Hyperbole means extravagant exaggeration of which President Kennedy and several Democrats and Republicans in the House were equally guilty. President Kennedy fixed the level of exaggeration when he told a national TV audience that his legislative program would be wrecked if the rules committee were not expanded from 12 to 15 members. Unless that were done, he said, we are through.

Republicans assailed the rules committee packing project as comparable to FDR's spectacular 1937 effort to pack the Supreme Court, an effort which failed. The really significant and revealing aspect of the controversy is, of course, the fact that the committee was voted by which the House on opening day expanded the committee from 12 to 15 members.

Made Permanent
The vote was 235 to 196, a margin of 39 votes. The same expansion was voted temporarily two years ago by a margin of only five votes. This time the expansion was made permanent and by a comfortable majority. That well may foreshadow some Kennedy triumphs in this new Congress that were defeats in 1960-61 by close margins. The 39-vote margin also suggests that the impact of the 1962 election on the House of Representatives was stronger in Kennedy's favor.

But to believe that the House now has control of the rules committee to the administration leadership is nonsense. The left wing splinter group, Americans for Democratic Action, ticked off the situation adequately in a statement made public here last week. ADA said the President's holy public campaign to continue the rules committee at 15 members was no more than a ploy to fight and, further, ADA had this to say:

"The 15-man committee is an effect and in principle just as obstructive to democratic decisions in the Congress as the old 12-man committee. Even in the temporarily enlarged committee in the 87th Congress 1961-62, the administration held a precarious and uncertain advantage of an 8 to 7 vote. Rejects Proposals.

"The committee in the 87th Congress rejected two major administration proposals and to education and the department of urban affairs and stopped action on 22 administration-supported bills which had been voted by House legislative committees."

The foregoing from ADA more properly evaluates the great rules committee sham battle than anything said by Kennedy or by most of the House members who discussed the matter.

The rules committee is a legislative-traffic cop. It determines what bills shall be submitted to the House for consideration. It deals with these bills after the legislative committees have considered them and reported them for a House vote.

There are parliamentary methods by which the rules committee can be bypassed. Neither the President nor the House Democratic leadership wanted a test on that issue — whether the rules committee actually should be dismantled and, in effect, nullified. There is no majority in the House for such strong measures at this time.

The traffic cop still has his whistle.

Construction is under way on a $3.9 million complex of seven new buildings at Central Hospital, operated by the Kentucky Department of Mental Health at Lakeland, near Louisville.

Encyclopedia Britannica Prints 'Newport' Article Written by Dr. Steely

Dr. Frank Steely, social science department, has written an article for the 1962 edition of the "Encyclopedia Britannica." Dr. Steely's article, "Newport," is a summary of the history of the Kentucky town. The summary includes the story of the settling and naming of the town, its incorporation as a village and a city, and a picture of Newport today.

"Newport" is one of 3,949 articles which were reviewed for the 1962 edition as part of a revision policy of the "Encyclopedia Britannica." Particular attention was given to articles on cities, states, and regions of the United States in the 1962 edition. Information was made available by the 1960 census reports.

More than 8,000 scholars and specialists have contributed to the "Encyclopedia Britannica." Forty-two of the contributors are Nobel Prize winners.

In the three-year period ending last Dec. 31, 3,585 new classrooms were added to Kentucky's public school system.

In 1796, a young stone mason helped lay the foundation for the governor's residence at Frankfort. Thirty years later, the same man, Thomas Metcalfe, made his home there as Kentucky's ninth governor. The building served as the Executive Residence until the present one was constructed in 1914.

VICE-PRESIDENT . . . Prof. John Winter, music division, fine arts department, is a new vice-president of the Kentucky Music Teacher's Association. Professor Winter was elected to this office at a recent meeting at Morehead State College.

Miss Herron Attends KLA Directors Meeting

Miss Ann Herron, assistant librarian, attended a meeting of the board of directors of the Kentucky Library Association Friday in Louisville. Miss Herron is exhibits chairman of KLA.

She also plans to attend the annual mid-winter meeting of the American Library Association Saturday through Feb. 1 in Chicago. Miss Herron is on the board of directors and on the membership committee of Exhibits Round Table.

Preceding this meeting Miss Herron will attend a short conference of the Association of American Library Schools. This meeting will be devoted to a discussion of four basic library school courses.

GIRL MISSING

A New Thriller BY EDNA SHERRY

CHAPTER 24

AFTER Iris Hampton, Fif's older sister, and they were all on their way down to the drawing room, Libby Sheldon said casually:

"Fif around? I'll just say hello to her."

Fif was around—in her room, experimenting with violet eye-shadow on her huge dark eyes. Libby knocked and went in without waiting. Fif turned, glowered, and Libby shrewdly put her at ease.

"Honey, with your coloring the brown shades are more effective—cinnamon or russet; blues are for blondes."

Fif, a thin little pixie-type, wasn't half as wise as she thought herself. She fell for Libby's camaraderie like a ten-pin and they spent a few moments discussing makeup. Then Libby, carelessly, in the doorway, said to the dates with Veronica and Carlo Ives:

"Fif's eyes widened to saucers."

"You know?" she stuttered.

"Oh, sure."

"But Ronny said—she made me swear—"

"I know that too. You didn't answer me. Was you on any of the dates with them?"

"Oh, no. There were only the two times, the night they went dancing last week and yesterday."

"Yesterday? You've got your times mixed. Yesterday they went back to school."

Fif, enjoying her position of being more in the know than the all-wise Libby, fell into this trap too.

"That's what you think. She started up. But Carlo picked her up at the station and drove her up in his car."

"How would you know? You weren't at the train."

"Ronny called me after they made the date. Suddenly conscience and caution overtook her. 'Hey! First you act nep to the whole thing and then you pump me dry. This is some kind of a trick!'

Libby gave a convincingly chummy laugh.

"I'll be honest, Fif. I did know she'd been dating Carlo, but I didn't have all the details about yesterday. I just wanted to fill in the picture."

"Ronny'll kill me for spilling it."

"No, she won't. Because I won't let her know you did. This is strictly between you and me, honey."

"Cross your heart?"

"Absolutely."

"Then I'll tell you this: Ronny engineered the whole business. She said she was going after Carlo hook, line and sinker. He's her kind of person."

"I see. Well, thanks, Fif."

Libby faced the bridal luncheon and shower with mixed attention. As the handsome gift of linens were presented to her, her mind was far away, formulating an important fact.

If Veronica and Carlo were kidnapped on the way up to the Tremblett School, then the locale of the kidnapping had to be in Connecticut, this side of Classen. This certainly should help the FBI.

HENRY SHELDON was not thinking of the FBI at the moment.

In the manager's office at his bank, of which he himself was a director, Henry was watching out counting and stacking up of the packets of hundred-dollar bills as he might have watched a blood transfusion.

This green flow was a life-giving restorative, guaranteed to snatch his darling child from the jaws of death.

There was a queer block in Henry's năfure. He was a man of deep and powerful emotions which he was incapable of expressing.

In a locked drawer of his office desk lay a small heap of mementos dearer to him than his massive fortune: the baby pictures of Ronny, a blonde curl of her hair, a ludicrously misspelled letter she had written him from Watch Hill at the age of seven; and a dozen other such trifles.

They were not trifles to him. But behind an actual physical inability to show his feelings. To Agatha, to Libby—to both of whom he was equally devoted—and to Ronny, he could show only the face of moderation, of just and cool authority. He would have died for any of them, but it was a fact of which they were all ignorant.

He was not a stupid man. He knew well that to trust the word of kidnapers was a sorry hope. But he had to trust because the alternative was too horrible to face. It was as if he felt that the very strength of his passion for Ronny's safety could have a psychological effect on the kidnapers' minds.

The bank manager said:

"Two packages seem advisable, Mr. Sheldon. The total weight is close to forty pounds if we include the cartons."

"Excellent. But please attach some sort of handle so that I can carry them more easily."

"Golly, that's ya."

"Well, of course, I mean my chauffeur."

"Mr. Sheldon. The manager's voice was both shocked and earnest. 'I must insist that you allow one of our armed guards to take charge of it until you actually hand it over to this—peculiar Texan.'"

Sheldon managed an uneasy laugh.

"Nonsense, Bolton. My man Johnson is a host in himself."

"But more than a million dollars!"

"Which the presence of an armed guard would advertise," Sheldon said dryly. "This way, nobody would dream that it was money at all."

"Won't the Texan expect protection?"

"A Texan?" said Sheldon gibbly. "I doubt it. He has his own plane and I believe he's flying home as soon as we sign and I turn over the cash to him. If you'll be good enough to send someone out for my chauffeur."

Twenty minutes later the safe in Henry's bedroom housed one million, one hundred thousand dollars, and Henry himself awaited instructions as to how and where it should be delivered to the unspeakable wretches who were holding his child.

ONE OF the unspeakable wretches was only a mile or two away at the moment. Nick Archer had driven into town early that morning to collect the trick suitcases with their false bottoms and the forged passports. Before he left Willow Farm, he said to Harry: "I'll spend the whole day in town, maybe even run out to Aqueduct for an hour or so."

"But Nick, if the Feds are around, they might pick you up."

"I don't go that fast. This agent I saw in Carol's office the other day has got no authority at all. He only collects evidence and reports to his superiors. They review the evidence and report to their superiors."

"A real run-around. But it's good. Give us plenty of time. I'm not pressing our luck. We're getting out as soon as we collect."

"Ain't you pressing your luck going to Aqueduct?"

"Anything but. That's insurance."

Listening through the hotel register again, Carlo becomes paralyzed with fear. Continue the story Monday.

Good News For Music Lovers At Murray-Calloway Library

By Mrs. Jean Blankenship

Do you like good music? Sometimes find it difficult to buy all the good records you would like to hear? The State Department of Libraries thinks so, and has just completed an extensive record buy for the Regional Libraries. A total of 120 albums of Columbia High-Fidelity Masterworks were recently placed on the shelves of the Murray-Calloway County Public Library for the listening public's enjoyment. Almost any musical taste can be satisfied, as the records range from original sound tracks of successful movies, through Broadway musicals, classical symphonies to world famous operas performed by noted artists.

A few of the albums which we now have for your enjoyment are: A Thruher Carnival — This recording was made by the original cast of the Broadway Musical. The performers include Tom Ewell, Peggy Cass, Paul Ford and John McVey, with Tom Ewell narrating the Ballad of the Last Flower. Gypsy — Miss Ethel Merman is the star of this musical based on the life of Gypsy Rose Lee. Gypsy gave its first performance on a bare stage with neither costumes nor lights, and only the sketchiest kind of an orchestra one warm April Sunday afternoon. Its audience consisted of most of New York's theatrical talents, and they received the musical with tumultuous applause, stopping the show on at least four occasions. A week later the show moved to Philadelphia, repeating the applause for five sold-out weeks. Gypsy then moved to New York and entertained crowds for months to come.

Two other Broadway musicals, Oh, Calcutta! with Tony Randall, produced by Jose Ferrer, which was the outstanding musical success of the Philadelphia season, and Simply Heavenly, with Claudia McNeil and Melvin Steward, a musical based on the stories of the celebrated Negro poet, Langston Hughes, and filled with haunting ballads and "red-hot licks" are available, as is the original sound-track of the movie "The Pajama Game" with Doree Day.

Departing from lighter music, we have many classical albums some of which are Leonard Bernstein with the New York Philharmonic and Beethoven's Symphony No. 7. This work was one of the staples on Mr. Bernstein's famous Russian tour, and when it was played in Moscow the audience refused to let Mr. Bernstein leave the stage until he pleaded with gestures that he was tired and needed rest. Said the New York Herald-American: "The Philharmonic has created a sensation in Moscow and with seldom unprecedented for any foreign organization." Several albums of Brahms' music, the Symphony No. 1 in C Minor, Op. 68, Bruno Walter conducting the Philharmonic, also Symphony No. 2 in D Major, Op. 73, and Symphony No. 4 in E Minor, Op. 98, are available. Rudolf Serkin is the pianist for Concerto No. 2 in E-flat Major.

The Wonderful Waltzes of Tchaikovsky and Strauss is an unusual combination. Strauss is the unchallenged champion of ballroom waltz music and Tchaikovsky has fashioned a host of the most delicate and danceable waltzes in the world. All the glister and brilliance of Old Vienna is presented as a foil for the melodies of a Russian master.

Mr. Pablo Casals, who has entertained Jacqueline Kennedy and her guests at the White House, is the noted cellist for Beethoven's Trio in E-flat Major, Op. No. 1. The other performing artists are Eugene Istomin, Pianist, and Joseph Fuchs, Violinist.

Prickie's Romeo and Juliet Ballet, Bizet's Carmen, and Stravinsky's Persiphone are well-known and loved by the musical world. Performers such as Richard Tucker, Robert Casadesu, Mitchell Miller, and the Budapest String Quartet are well represented.

Time and space do not permit the listing of all the beautifully performed and recorded selections which we now have for you at the library. These albums may be checked-out on the same basis as the books and played on your record player at home. If you are the owner of a stereophonic system, these records will play with even more brilliant, to-life fidelity. For the winter months still ahead, enrich your musical tastes with these albums. The State Department of Libraries at Frankfort wishes you "Happy Listening!"

ALLERGIC TO MONTY? — Believing the baby is allergic to something she wears, Mrs. Harry Gibbs of Moline, Ill., carries her 10-month-old son, Kevin, into the University of Illinois Hospital in Chicago for a series of tests. Kevin breaks out in a violent rash when his mother is near.
